THOUGH in the case of two such admirable artists as Emma Eames and her husband, Emilio de Gogorza, one would have preferred a programme more definitely planned on recital lines, there is no doubt that their recent concert contained a popular appeal and sound enjoyment for the lover of good singing. Though Madame Eames' voice has lost some of its pristine freshness, it is still a noble and bell-like organ, while Mr. Gogorza is assuredly one of the finest concert baritones in the world.
It was indeed to him that the chief honors of the evening went. His voice is of wonderfully mellow and vibrant quality; it glows with warmth and he throws so much personality into what he sings that he never fails to evoke enthusiasm. In addition to the nobility of his voice and his finesse as an interpreter that makes his singing of the aria from Massenet's "Le Roi de Lahore" so admirable: while the dash he imparts to such bravura numbers as the "Largo al Factum" from Rossini's "Barber of Seville," and the Toreador song from "Carmen" is inimitable.
Even Campanari in his palmiest days hardly equalled him in these numbers. The exquisitely humorous intonations he gave to the various calls of "Figaro" in the Rossini number were never equalled by the great Italian. In his English songs the charm and warmth of his style are always attractive, but one must confess that one is rather tired of Mr.
Cadman's useful ditty—for it is nothing more—"From the Land of the Sky Blue Water." Having been sung by every notable concert singer who has appeared here during the past two years, it seems time that it was relegated to parlor use. It is a pleasant lyric with which a young lady might entertain her sweetheart before producing the coffee and "fudge."

The reproach against Madame Eames in the past has been that she lacked temperament; her beauty is of the austere classic type, and her voice was beautiful in a crystalline, rather than in an emotional way. On this occasion, however, she displayed more warmth than in the past. One liked best of all her beautiful rendering of Schubert's early song, "Margaret at the Spinning Wheel," in which she depicts the sorrows of the wronged girl brooding over her spinning as she thinks of Faust. The accompaniment, which imitates the sound of the wheel, and alters in tempo as the girl pauses from time to time in her reverie, is peculiarly charming, and though the vocal part, which is written on but few notes, permits of no display, it is fraught with an emotion that Madame Eames beautifully expressed. Lovely in the clarity of its runs and roulades was the Henschel "Spring Song," which she rendered by request. Delightfully pure in intonation and sung in a style entirely in keeping with the simplicity of the old fashioned music were her renderings of Haydn's "My Mother bids me Mind my Hair," and Carey's "Sally in our Alley." Of the several duets that the singers gave, but one possesses any special interest. This was Faure's "Le Crucifix," a beautiful number in itself, which was sung with an exquisite blending of voices.

So long as he conformed himself to playing accompaniments, one had no objection whatever to the gentleman

Mr. J. S. Metcalfe, dramatic critic of New York Life, who is in touch with the head centres of theatrical activity, weekly provides readers of Saturday Night with preliminary information as to coming attractions.
Mr. Metcalfe tells the truth with an unbiased mind.

JUST TO LAUGH.

There are parrot stories and sleeping car stories without number. The parrot doesn't lend itself very well to dramatization, but sleeping car suggestion has had two extremely laughable demonstrations on the stage. The generation before this one can never forget the irresistible fun of "Tourists in a Pullman Car" with the late William A. Westaway and Theresa Vaughan. "Excuse Me" is not far behind it in the power to excite merriment.

In the Westaway place the interior of the sleeping car was shown as though one were looking down the stage and out of forced man of the action to the front of the stage and out of the picture. In "Excuse Me" modern stage improvements permit the sleeper to be shown as though one side of the car has been lifted off, which adds to the illusion and permits more different kinds of fun to be going on at the same time. Mr. Rupert Hughes, the author, has taken full advantage of his opportunities and Mr. Willis P. Sweatman, as the porter, who really overshadows the Pullman corporation's original production of when a sleeper is under way, is a twenty-four carat con with out a trace of alloy.

If you need a laugh in your system, "Excuse Me" will probably provide it.

LESSON IN HUMILITY.

The Bishop of Benares, if there is such a diocese and such a dignitary in the jurisdiction of the Church of England, is really a less important personage than the several expert who in "The Servant in the House" points the virtue of true Christian democracy. The original production of Dr.
Rann Kennedy's really remarkable drama this part fell to the lot of Mr. Tyrone Power and he made of what was perhaps intended to be a character bit, lifting the play out of its atmosphere of symbolic seriousness, a really dramatic and most effective piece of powerful acting.

The literary value of "The Servant in the House" gives it a vitality greater than that of most contemporary dramas. It is not alone the universal value of the theme it illustrates nor its acting qualities as shown by its first very excellent cast, but both these influences in establishing the first vogue of the piece have been supplemented in making it an enduring value through the fact that its author was a writer as well as a dramatist.
That reason the story as told in "The Servant in the House" still has the power to interest despite the fact that the play is no longer a novelty and that there have been many changes in the original cast.

James S. Metcalfe

would write a play upon the very timely subject of woman's suffrage, theatrical producers were eager to take it, "unsightlessly." That was why Toronto had the privilege of seeing the first and last performance on any stage of "Julia Francis." Never did a company work harder than did Mrs. Fiske and her associates to give some semblance of life to a creation obviously still born, but all efforts were useless. The radical defect in the play was that Mrs. Fiske had approached her task from the standpoint of the novelist, whose readers are obliged to take for granted all the kind things that she says about her characters. On the stage the virtues of a character must be proven in action and not in words, or it is not a character at all, but a lay figure to hang words upon. Such was the heroine of this play, although Mrs.
Fiske made a vain effort to give her personality. Provided with something in the way of action, Miss Kathleen Macdonell and Miss Gilda Varela managed to do a little with the roles of an impulsive maiden and a savage old woman respectively, but they did not succeed in convincing anyone that they were representing real characters. As for the idolized superman who talked like Lincoln B.
Steffens, he was one of the creations of the feminine mind that full blooded men desire to kick. By the way one knows not why Mrs. Atherton placed her play on the Island of Nevis, unless it was to prove that men are more than votes to women. It was notable that as soon as a man loomed up in this semi-deserted clime until the easily foreseen end was reached. All suspense ends about the middle of the play and then it was up to the actors to amuse the audience by whatever means were at their power. This is the excuse that Miss Crossman may legitimately offer for the persistent over-accutuation-that she indulged in. She was ably supported by Miss Josephine Lovett, who showed the transformation of a dowdy over-motherly mother into a beautiful and lively woman in a charming way and by two of the most adept and refined farceurs of the American stage, both of them, by the way, old friends of the Toronto public, Messrs. Albert Brown and Fred Tiden. The stock exchange which these actors have enjoyed has given them an ease and skill in building up a part which proved an invaluable aid both to the star and to the writer of the play.

I HAVE no taste for the epicene performances of such actors as Julian Eltinge. The kind of female impersonator that I enjoy is George Munroe. I would give more for five minutes of George Munroe's rollicking fun than for two hours of the finesse of Mr. Eltinge, in imitating the manners and appearance of a beautiful woman, which it must be admitted he does with remarkable skill. It may be due to the arrogance of our sex that, while the average man has no prejudice against pretty girls appearing as boys if they are so inclined, he feels a sort of repugnance toward the pretty boy who photographic group representing Dickens reading to his daughters on the lawn in front of the novelist's residence at Gad's Hill, the book which engrosses their attention is Charles "French Revolution." Forster in his biography refers to the fact that one of the proposed titles for this story was "Monks' Cartons," showing that what he took to be the greatest success was then prominent in his mind. The home personality of Sydney Carton undoubtedly made him a favorite with every reader.

In 1846 it was suggested to Dickens that, instead of spending his time in short papers for his weekly contribution, "All the Year Round," he should let himself loose upon some single humorous presentation in the vein of his early sketches, and in the latter part of that year he commenced "Great Expectations." This novel, like "David Copperfield," is written in the first person throughout, the hero a boy child, who is removed from the care of his ramshackle sister, and taken to London to be educated as a gentleman.

The only Dickens manuscript to find a resting place in America was that of his next book, "Our Mutual Friend," which is now in the library of the Free Library at Philadelphia. During the writing of this story Dickens was worried and ill. On the way home from a short trip to France, he experienced a terrible shock in the Staplehurst railway accident, and could never again travel on the railway without the most severe mental anguish. Produced under such circumstances, it is hardly surprising that, in the opinion of many, "Our Mutual Friend" does not rank with Dickens' highest achievements.

While preparing the early numbers of his last book, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," the novelist was engaged upon his "Farewell Readings," which took place in London during the opening months of 1870. London was con-

WHEN as a child one went to the play, one formed a resolve that some day one would keep a butler, and for a very good reason. It appeared that to your last dollar, all you had to do was to let the butler know, and he would say: "Well, you have always been generous to me, and I have managed to lay by a tidy sum, sir. If it would be of any assistance to you, sir, you are welcome to it, sir." As the years went on and the old fashioned sentimental plays were relegated to obscurity, the benevolent butler was forgotten. Therefore, it was with a thrill as one recalling the lost illusions and sentiments of youth that one met the old fellow again in the third act of "The Grain of Dust." Blessings on thy thrift and kindly heart, and on thy servant, even if you never really ex-ist.

The play which Mr. Louis Evan Shipman has made from David Graham Phillips' last novel, while it is a fair reflex of the average magazine staff writer's theory of how financiers conduct their affairs, has the cardinal defect of being unconvincing. Of course, the impossible is always happening in real life, but on the stage we demand a certain amount of plausibility. The writer has tried without success to read several of the late Mr. Phillips' novels, and it is just possible that for those who are used to get through it, "The Grain of Dust" contained ample explanation of the actions of the various characters. Carefully placed upon the stage, with just the bones of the story outlined, most of the action seems fantastic. We are asked to suppose, for instance, that one of the greatest financiers of America is so intent on making a brilliant young lawyer marry his daughter, that he employs all his resources to ruin the young man when he fails to do so. Now, this may be a sufficient motive for stage purposes, but in real life, high financiers chiefly exert themselves to keep their daughters from getting married at all, and the more broken engagements in the family, the better the old gentlemen are pleased. We are asked also to consider that the stenographer for whom the young lawyer sacrifices a career and who, when his fortunes are at their lowest—ebb, leaves him, is a person worthy of being taken back to his bosom when he is restored to wealth. In the play the lady's all-sufficient excuse for her earlier actions is that she does not love him, though she is willing to marry him for financial reasons. So capricious a daniel would stand little opportunity of being taken back by her husband in real life. There have been cases where women, in a mad infatuation for some other man, have run away, returned and been forgiven; but a creature so cold and loveless

MUSIC & DRAMA

Mr. J. S. Metcalfe, dramatic critic of New York Life, who is in touch with the head centres of theatrical activity, weekly provides readers of Saturday Night with preliminary information as to coming attractions. Mr. Metcalfe tells the truth with an unbiased mind.

"THE WEEK OF APRIL 1ST."

There seems to be something ominous in a theatrical week which starts in with All Fool's Day, particularly when one notes the attractions offered to Toronto, which city anyone but theatrical booking agents might regard as having been already a waste of critical ammunition to use anything but the smallest bird shot on such entertainments as "Jumping Jupiter" with Mr. Richard Carle, and "The Filling Princess" with Mr. Harry Bulger. They are not even very good of their kind and musical shows would have any power of attraction for people is so easy, an alleged comedian and a bunch of chorus girls being the only important essentials, that managers may perhaps be excused for not supplying entertainments that require brains in their organization, production and performance. And the managers are not to be blamed if the public supplies patronage and support for that kind of entertainment. The remedy lies in the hands of the public.

as the heroine of this play would hardly stand a chance with any man. One is not denying the possibility of any episode in this play, but as has been pointed out, it does not convince.

The acting of the men in the cast was for the most part satisfactory. While there is nothing very flexible in the personality of Mr. Hackett, he knows his business thoroughly and leaves a virile impression as the much tried lawyer. The versatility of Mr. E. M. Holland is always a delight. Last year he is an entirely different being as a jovial American of the same calling. He is the reverse of the actor who lies himself down to cut and dried stage types. Frazer Coulter, as the domineering capitalist, was interesting in an explosive way, and the balance of the cast competent, although the leading lady failed to do anything with the heroine. However, she had already been condemned to death by the dramatists.

The recent violin recital of Miss Lina Drechsler Adamson served to demonstrate what a high order of talent the local musical forces of this city embrace. One has heard of such recitals in which an artist was listened to with more sustained delight and appreciation. This was due not only to the fact that the programme was remarkably well put together and of rare interest but to the additional circumstances that Miss Adamson, herself one of the finest musicians that this country has produced, had an accompanist worthy of her in Mrs. Gerard Barton. The result was a unit of effect absolutely satisfying. What struck one as unique in the playing of the violinist was that an executant with a personality so feminine and charming should display such virility in her interpretations. In such a number as the Wieniawski concerto she displays a bowing arm the power of which many a male interpreter might well envy. Facile as she is in all technical tricks for the left hand it is her breadth of tone when she draws her bow across the strings that fascinates the listener. The first and last movements of this work demand brilliant treatment and Miss Adamson astonished her hearers by the authority with which she mastered the difficulties which are rife in them. In the slow movement the warmth and poetry of her tone delighted the ear. The shorter numbers on her programme included many novelties and were charmingly varied in style. Especially delightful was the sketch entitled "Oriental" by the aged Polish composer Cesar Cui which was rendered with a poetic and atmospheric quality in keeping with the composition. That Cadman the American composer who makes a specialty of North American Indian themes is more than a song composer, was shown by his thoroughly delightful "Wah-wah-taysee" (Little Fire-fly) which was exquisitely rendered.

Among other delightful offerings performed in a most satisfying way, in the matter of both tone and technique one may mention Massenet's "Crepuscule," Kreiser's "Caprice Viennois" and Sarasate's "Zapateado." To many listeners, however, the most exquisite episode of all was Tchaikovsky's "Serenade Melancholique" rendered with beautiful poetic fervor by both the violinist and accompanist. The special qualities of Mrs. Barton in the latter capacity are her intellectual grasp, the tenderness of her touch and the sympathy of her response to the music.

Miss Nellie Stevenson, a nurse from Rochester, who is visiting friends at 39 Fisher street, suffered severe injuries yesterday by being crushed between cars at Queen and Bathurst streets. She received a compound fracture of the right leg below the knee.

Miss Stevenson was crossing the intersection behind a Duquesne street car, which had jumped the switch point. Instead of going up Bathurst street, the car went ahead on Queen street. When the motorist discovered that the car had missed the "point," he quickly reversed the power, backing up and jamming Miss Stevenson against a Queen street car which had been waiting for the car ahead to get clear of the switch.

Miss Stevenson was picked up by Constable Padgett, who rendered first aid, pending the arrival of the police ambulance, which conveyed her to the Western Hospital. The excellent work of the policeman was greatly praised by the doctors at the hospital.

RR FOR PLAYGROUND SUPERVISORS

Free Lectures to Instruct Those Interested in That Work.

Free lectures to those wishing to become Supervisors of Playgrounds, in those conducted either by the Playgrounds Association, by the City Council, or by the Board of Education, and to all other persons who are interested, have been arranged by the association. There will be nine in all, given in King Edward School, Bathurst street, near College, as follows:

May 2 and 3, at 8 p.m., and May 4, 10 a.m., by Miss Marie Hofer, of Chicago, on "Folk Songs and Folk Plays and Games"; May 9 and 10, at 8 p.m., and May 11, 10 a.m., by Mr. Sidney Teller, Chicago, on "Practical Problems in Playground Management"; May 14, 8 p.m., by Mrs. A. M. Hughes, on "Epochs in Child Development"; May 17, 8 p.m., by Miss E. B. Neufeldt, on "The Family in Relation to the Playground"; and May 18, 10 a.m., by Miss Edith Constance Ellwood, on "Industrial Activities in the Playground."

BETTER FIRE ALARMS.

A new and enlarged switchboard for the telephone fire alarm system of the city will be installed at a cost of $2,290 per annum. This will be an increase of $896 in the annual cost, but Chief Thompson reported to the Civic Fire and Light Committee yesterday that the present system is antiquated and inadequate. The Committee decided on the improvement system.

the public and theatrical managers of reputation and experience, who saw Mr. Hawtrey and his excellent company in this play during their four months' run in Chicago, unhesitatingly declare that a more capable or better balanced company has not been assembled in many years, as did the critics of Toronto. To assist Mr. Hawtrey in presenting one of the "cleanest, crispest and most wholesomely funny farces that has ever been brought to America," Delamater has selected a company that include E. H. Kelly, formerly with Sir Henry Irving; George Stuart Christie, formerly leading man with Bertha Kalisch; Bernard Fairfax, formerly with John Drew; Harry Redding, formerly leading juvenile with William Faversham; Harry Lonsdale, formerly with R. S. Wills; Miss Jane Burby, eight seasons with May Irwin; Miss Cassie Jamieson, formerly with Beerbohm Tree; and Miss Ruth Tomlinson, formerly with the Mary Manning Company; with the Mary Manning Company; Miss Laura Clement, for the past three seasons with Billie Burke; Winifred Kingston, formerly with John Drew; Ella Dixon, previously with William Gillett, and others with wide reputations.

"EVERYWOMAN."

At the Royal Alexandra Theatre yesterday the advance sale for "Everywoman" reached the high-water mark. All day long the box office was besieged by playgoers, who have been keenly awaiting the advent of this famous play, and the conclusion of the day's sale that "Everywoman" eclipsed all records of the house this season for a single day's sale. So much enthusiastic praise has reached the ears of Toronto playgoers from other cities where "Everywoman" has already been presented that the liveliest interest has in consequence been manifested over its long deferred visit. Frederick Warde, Marie Wainwright, Jane Oaker, Nestor Lennon and the other notable players head the cast.

ELIZABETHAN REVELS.
A unique entertainment was given last night by the students of the Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression, entitled "Elizabethan Revels." The program included folk songs and dances of the Elizabethan period, the performers appearing in the quaint and occasionally startling costumes of the days of Shakespeare. A succession of morris and country dances were given with abandon by a number of young lady students, with an old-fashioned charm that won the interest of the audience. Then there were interspersed a selection of the songs of the period, contributed by Miss Mildred Marsh, Mrs. Barton, Miss Sargent, and Mr. Warren Walker, which harmonized with the general plan of the entertainment. The folk songs and dances were under the direction of Miss Hamilton, who may quiesce as to the date of its engagement, and the mail orders that have been coming in indicate that every playgoer is alive to the importance of this engagement. The comedy is said to offer four acts of the most delightful humor ever staged.

THE GAYETY.

Novelties galore will be presented by Jacobs and Jormen's "Golden Crook" extravaganza company next week at the Gayety Theatre. "Always a good show" is the slogan handed to this company by one of the managers who has come to look upon its advent as a record-breaker in the matter of box office receipts. Fifty performers are engaged in presenting this production. The management has secured several musical numbers which have been elaborately staged; they are catchy and have those peculiarly swinging airs that are easily remembered and are soon whistled.

BAYES AND NORWORTH COMING.

Everyone has at some time or other heard some of the songs which have been composed and written by charming Nora Bayes and her husband, Jolly Jack Norworth, and the announcement that these two talented stars of musical comedy and vaudeville are to be seen here with their own company in an entertainment entitled "A Musical Surprise Party" will be hailed with delight. The date of the engagement of the Bayes and Norworth "Musical Surprise Party" is announced for next week in Shea's big bill, and that crowded houses will greet them is a foregone conclusion.

RECITAL IN NORDHEIMER HALL.

Great interest is being taken in musical circles in the recital to be given by Miss Grace Smith, pianist; Miss Betty Caldwell, contralto; and Mr. Paul Hahn, cellist, to be given in Nordheimer Hall, at 1111 St. Lawrence street, at 8 p.m. on Monday, April 23.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, General Secretary of the Methodist movement of Temperance and Moral Reform, left last night to join the party on their tour of the interests of the World's Unity Federation. He will catch up with them at Atlantic City this morning, and proceed to Washington, and on through North and South Carolina, Tennessee, and Alabama, before he is back about May 5.

MUSIC and the DRAMA

CONDUCTED BY E. R. PARKHURST.

Toronto will to-day have as its guest one of the most renowned musical men of the age in the person of Mr. Arthur Nikisch, the famous orchestral conductor, now of Leipzig, Germany, who comes with the immense London Symphony Orchestra for one concert in Massey Hall to-night. No student of music in this city can afford to miss the instruction one is bound to receive by attending this event. The orchestra played in Buffalo last night to a large and very enthusiastic audience. To-night's program in Massey Hall is one that may be thoroughly enjoyed by all who are fortunate enough to be present. The orchestra's playing of the overture to "Tannhauser" is said to be a marvelous production, everywhere making a most tremendous sensation, and in every case meeting with thunderous applause and enthusiasm and a demand for an encore. The great organization travel in their own special train of nine Pullmans, and will reach Toronto about noon, leaving again at midnight for Ottawa, where they give a performance out of courtesy to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the patrons of the tour. At 7.15 to-night the doors of the hall open, and at that time there will be placed on sale 500 rush seats. Half of these will be at $1 and the other 250 at $1.50.

WM. HAWTREY.

By special arrangement with Mr. A. G. Delamater, the management of the Grand Opera House, announce for the week beginning Monday, the eminent English character actor, Mr. William Hawtreay, and his all-English company of London players, exactly the same company that appeared in Toronto last November to high prices, in a three-act farce by a noted English writer, W. H. Risque. The title of the piece is "Dear Old Billy," and concerns the dilemmas of a good-natured and kindly old gentleman who has submitted for twenty years to being perpetually nagged by a domineering wife, but who, like the proverbial worm, at last turns, and decides to legally rid himself of the virago. The critics, the public and theatrical managers of reputation and experience, who saw Mr. Hawtreay and his excellent company in this play during their four months' run in Chicago, unhesitatingly declare that a more capable or better balanced company has not been assembled in many years, as did the critics of Toronto. A record-breaking line of seat purchasers should face the box office window of the Princess Theatre this morning, when the advance sale opens for the engagement of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," announced at this playhouse for a week beginning next Monday evening. Ever since this comedy by Geo. M. Cohan scored its wonderful success in New York over a year ago the Princess Theatre has been besieged by inquiries as to the date of its local engagement, and the mail orders that have been coming in indicate that every playgoer is alive to the importance of this engagement. a report of a check concerning Fitzgerald's concerning blank checks sent to Travers at the time the checks were secured, Mr. Hodgins asked: "was the stub of this check 'C' and 'bank premises'?" It was a mysterious check of which Travers refused to speak. "I don't know unless it had reference to some purchase of property," said the witness.

"Are you buying property at that time, we were fixing up the Toronto houses?"

"I did you mark the check."

Travers told me to just mark the 'C' and to charge it to the Ontario account," replied Fitzgerald.

"What were you paying organizational expenses at this time for?" asked the Commissioner.

"I don't know," responded the witness. "I merely did as I was told." "Are the subscriptions sent to Ottawa at the time the certificate was made?"

"I don't know of. While I don't say I did not send them, I remember having done so."

Not Authorize Circulation, as Travers Said.

Special Despatch to The Globe.) Ottawa, May 22.—Sir Richard Wright has issued a denial of the report in the press to the effect made by W. A. Travers at Farmers Bank inquiry in Toronto to-day, to the effect that Sir Richard had practically authorized a private conversation to issue a statement against the farmers notes of the bank.

Richard says:—"I did not know Travers, and I very much doubt whether I had any conversation with him at all. In any case the statement is absurd on its very face—the statement which a bank is authorized to issue has nothing whatever to do with the amount or character of the notes it holds. The circulation of the notes is not on the amount of its paid-up capital."

MARGARET EATON SCHOOL CLOSING

LARGE GATHERING AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES—PRIZES PRESENTED.

A large audience attended the commencement of the Margaret Eaton School of Expression last evening in the Greek Theatre, North street. One of the interesting features was an address to the graduates by Professor James Mavor on the history of culture from the time of Bacon. The President, Rev. Dr. Nathaniet-Burwash, gave an address also at the opening of the evening's proceedings, and Mrs. Scott Raff, the Principal, spoke to the students.

The session just closed has been the most successful in the history of the institution, three hundred and six students having been in attendance.

The Josephine Burnside Scholarship of $200 was given to the students of the Methodist Church Training School, and the R. Y. Eaton Scholarship of $100 to the students of the Church of England Training School. The Harry McGee Scholarship of $50 for interpretation was won by Miss Dora Mavor, and the J. J. Vaughan Scholarship of $25 for interpretation by Miss K. Ingle. These have all been awarded through the year.

The following prizes were presented last night:—The George Nasmith prize of $10 for physical education, won by Miss Sylvia McAllister; the Mrs. A. C. Rogers Scholarship of $25, Miss Mohna Walter; the Gerhard Heintzman prize for development, Miss Taddie Armstrong; special scholarship prize, Miss Mildred Marsh, and the Dorothy Raff Optima prize, won by Miss Sylvia McAllister.

Also the following diplomas:—Artists' and teachers' course, Miss Helen L. McFetridge; graduate students—Misses Sylvia McAllister, Wilma Adam, L. M. Johnston, Nora MacKendrick, Carrie DeLong, Dora Mavor and Marjorie Ritchie; physical training department—Miss Marcia Kammerer, Miss Dorothy Peterson and Miss Helena Wighton.

Shakespearean monologues were admirably rendered by Misses Alice Rothwell, B.A., Dora Mavor, Marcia Kammerer, Carrie DeLong and Helen L. McFetridge, and a Browning reading by Miss Wilma Adam. Miss Sylvia McAllister read the prize essay on Physical Education, which elicited commendation from Prof. Mavor in his address. Excellent taste was displayed also in the rendering of readings from Edmund Gosse by Miss Mildred Marsh, from Longfellow by Miss Mona Walter, and from Keats by Miss Dorothy Peterson, while the audience was delighted by songs by Miss Mabel Doherty and Mrs. Charles F. Barton. All the students taking part won the highest standing in their several departments.

During the week preceding the Commencement interesting open classes were conducted:—Mrs. Scott Raff's classes in Browning and Shakespeare, also in recitation and criticism; Miss N. Topley Thomas' Dramatic Thinking class, and Miss Mary Hamilton's in Physical Education, which gave a splendid exhibition of its work, giving special attention to folk dancing. Also Miss McFetridge gave an interesting recital of "Twelfth Night." These were attended by many interested friends.

Montclair Park, the newly-annexed district west of Spadina road and north of St. Clair avenue, will be declared a residential district at the which she played the Beethoven "Moonlight," Sonata Nocturne by Chopin, Mendelssohn's G minor concerto, Marche Militaire, Schubert, Tausig, and the "Rigoletto" paraphrase by Liszt.

PAULINE COMING TO SHEA'S.

Next week Shea's Theatre has for the headline attraction Pauline, the hypnotist, who returns to this country after several seasons in Europe. Pauline is a sensation. He combines humor with science and his hypnotic power often puzzles the scientists. The special features for the week are the Youngman family, marvellous wire artists, and James Diamond and Clara Nelson, late features of "Up and Down Broadway" in "Something New." Other feature acts to be seen are Annie Kent, "The Little Jester"; Haydn, Borden and Hady, in "Bits of Vaudeville"; Billy "Swede," Hall and Company in "Made Good"; Mme. Alaska's Cats, and the Kinetograph.

PIANO RECITAL.

A large and interested audience attended the pianoforte recital given in the Margaret Eaton School by Miss Bessie Kerr, Mr. Cyril Moss and Mr. Kenneth Kingdon, three advanced pupils of Mr. W. F. Pickard. In the playing of an exacting program of works by Bach, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Hiller, Stojowski, Sapellnikoff and Debussy, these pupils gave evidence of careful training and study, playing with good style and sound musicianship. Mr. Hartwell De Mille, baritone, was the assisting and welcome vocalist.

"BOWERY BURLESQUERS."

The announcement concerning the presentation of the "Bowery Burlesquers" at the Gayety Theatre next week is being greeted with more than ordinary enthusiasm, pretty much due to a desire to see Fitzgerald and Quinn and Lizzie Freligh and their well-balanced company of singers, dancers and comedians. The names of Fitzgerald and Quinn and Lizzie Freligh are enough to conjure up all sorts of pleasurable fun and music.

EMPIRE DAY CONCERT.

The annual concert of the public schools takes place to-night at Massey Hall under the direction of Mr. Llew Rees. The chorus will consist of one thousand voices and the band of the Grenadiers will assist in the program. The competitions in singing for the gold medal, the championship shield for double trio, and Mr. James Simpson's shield for the best choir will be decided, and the presentations made before the audience.

TO SING TO THE DUKE.

Mr. F. S. Hamer, the talented tenor, a pupil of Dr. Albert Ham, who made so favorable an impression at the closing concert of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, has been selected to sing at the Empire Club banquet on Friday before the Duke of Connaught and party.

SOMETHING UNIQUE FOR VICTORIA DAY.

In the line of outings for Victoria Day how does a trip to the Lake Simcoe free-dinner, a grand Baby Show, a program of athletic sports, music and games, and the opportunity to see a regular old-time Western Barbecue or Ox Roast strike you? That's the program being carried out under the auspices of the salesmen of Laughlin Realty, Limited. They invite the public to join them—leaving here on the train at 9 in the morning or on the afternoon train. This will give any person who could buy a lot in Roadside—if convinced that it was a good investment—a chance to size up the situation for themselves as well as to enjoy an extremely cheap and interesting holiday outing. Coupons to be exchanged for railway tickets, may be had at the Laughlin Realty office.

The Synod placed on record its appreciation of the work of the general and its sense of loss, and expressed the hope that his son might fill his place, also wishing to be in the organization. A Canon of the King and the Archbishop of Canterbury had both honored the late General Booth, said the and in view of the great work carried out, it was only that the Church should take of the man and his work, was what other Churches had to do. The motion was seconded by Rev. Canon Tucker, and followed quite a number of others, all of whom paid their tribute, some of them acknowledging early prejudices had been removed. The only dissentient voice was that of Rev. Canon Simpson, who objected to the clause wishing speed, because he held that any repudiated the Sacraments, cries of "No, no," it was expected that the Army encouraged members to avail themselves of sacraments of any Church. Thereupon the resolution was passed with dissent.

who becomes the confederate of burglar, in order that she may raise the hundred dollars which she may need to help her husband to Vermont to a homestead, so that her child may not be a waifling of the lums. Her crime is a small one, but it is a crime of course. But after she is discovered, she sees the charge against her withdrawn, and the way is opened for her to start in a new world.

The enormous possibilities of such a role must be at the disposal of the actress. Miss Millington is certainly not new to them. In fact, the trouble is that she is thoroughly aware of it, and is ready to emphasize the part, and to make a merely a minor 'démissem' in view of the exciting nature of the character. Her whole-hearted sincerity of feeling with her puts into it, she has not hesitated to make her personal appearance on the stage, and she is modest, and that is no small sacrifice for a star who is content and

Mr. Byron Beasley is excellent as the husband. He gives one of the best performances of the production and it is to be commended for the straightness of his performance. There are temptations to stray into sentiment, but the temptation is strong to be correct. Another admirable performance is that of Ida Lewis as Mrs. Burdett. The mother of the burglar, Mrs. Burdett, which is well played by Irene Duncan, and which is to be commended that Sydney Marchant, as the doctor, the society girl as "Lucy," Robert Taylor, as Dr. Taylor, the physiognomist, are not better qualified to conceal the roughness in their respective roles than the scene between the two roles and the scene, is painful in its amateurish weakness. But there is so much to be commended in this production that it is not to be allowed to be crude and the allowances for the amateurishness of the production have left a residue of solid merit, and the interest which lifts "Kindling" above the average of the plays of Symbolism was the keynote of the annual recital of Mrs. Scott Hoff at the Margaret L. Scott Library. Literature and Expression last Saturday forenoon. Mrs. Hoff has ever been foremost in the development of the library drama among the students. Her pupils' recitals in this recital lived up to included in the fourth act of "The Contraband" and "Brand," which are read with a dramatic effect. In contrast was the playfulness of the "Falcon" and the significance of her rendering of the "Paler" episode. Louise M. Alcott's immortal "Little Women," dramatised by Marian De Forest at a Buffalo newspaper woman, will be presented under William A. Gillette's management at the Alexander Theatre. "The Women of the Year" comes direct to Toronto from Chicago, where it is enjoying great popularity at McVicker's Theatre. No better play could be ordered for the season. It is essentially wholesome and is filled with tenderly felt sentiment. The setting is in the early sixties in New England. Every character in Miss Alcott's classic is fully portrayed by an excellent cast. The most prominent among whom is Virginia Pritchard, a former Toronto actress, and the Canadian actress, Jean Bair, formerly the well-known elocutionist, Miss Violet McNaughton, of Toronto.

Dec. 8th the second of a series of afternoon musicals by pupils of H. Ethel Shephard was given at the beautiful study of the latter in the Music Conservatory of Music. The contributions to the programme were by Miss Elsie Kemp, who sang "The Rose Tree" and "The Bird Song" by Ethel B. Armour and Mildred for a large and an eventful audience. Miss Kemp is a soprano of no mean ability and sang, with considerable effect, "The Rose Tree," as was attested by her encore from "Mad as a Hatter." Her musical qualities were shown in the "Fair Lady" of Von Flotow. Her songs are lyrical and this illustrates her talent.

Another song cycle of the same kind by Don Riego's pupils, Misses Armour and Graydon, both of whom sang with much ability and to the accompaniment of a very delightful accompanist.

Give One
Good Gift

Here is a splendid plan that many people are adopting this Christmas. Instead of giving a gift to every member of the family, they are combining their remembrances in one substantial, enduring present, like an Edison Amberola, or Victor Victrola. Thus your remembrance is four times more valuable to every member of the family than if you gave them separate gifts, and at the same time the total cost is probably less. Again, think of the unbounded pleasure a gift such as one of the new Edison or Victor instruments will afford—365 days of pleasure every year for years to come—a constant reminder of YOU.

Edison

Mr. Edison's new inventions—the new Blue Amberol Record and the Diamond Reproducing Point—now used on all his Phonographs and Amberolas, has given this instrument a tone that is positively amazing in its strength, purity and quality. Edison Phonographs range in price from $19.50 for the little "Gem" to $250 for the Mahogany Amberola. Terms accorded, if desired.

Victor

The recent new styles in Victor Victorolas have given an impetus to the sales of this instrument that threatens to completely exhaust the supply of machines available. We will, in all probability, be sold out of Victorolas, except the cheapest or the most expensive kind, some time before Christmas, and we earnestly urge that you do not delay your purchase if you wish not to be disappointed. Victorolas range in price from $20 to $300.
